ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

James would like to thank his longtime assistant Katie Carter who watches every film, goes over every chapter, fixes the typos and offers intelligent insights. A film critic, historian, and scholar in her own right, Katie has the frame of reference and clear understanding of cinema's aesthetic to make her contributions invaluable.

James would also like to mention his late wife Diana and late son Max who inspire everything he does.

Gary would like to give special thanks to his wife Kelly whose meticulous editing eye and unceasing support and encouragement added peerless polish and perspective to everything he wrote.

Gary would also like to thank his boyhood-turned-AARP-hood friends John Thomsen, Lenard Trusky, James Smith, Mike White and the late Steve Hess, who were his constant companions on trips to Kenosha, Wisconsin's Roosevelt Theater in the 1970s, where together they first encountered and couldn't laugh hard enough at the action-packed frolicking of the movie star that was Burt Reynolds.

The authors would also like to thank Jane Alexander and Robert Davi, actors who appeared with Reynolds and his longtime friend Clint Eastwood in City Heat, for their recollections of and insight into the making of that film.

Special thanks also to Kelly Parmelee, Jill Blake, Ted Okuda, Steve Morelli, Farran Nehme, the Lynch family, Peter Jackel, Heather Kirschnenman, Alyssa Flory, Hunter Flory and the late Jim Bishop, Jerry Lewis, and Brian Weiher.

DEDICATION

TO JILL BLAKE

Whose understanding of cinema and admiration for Burt Reynolds' work helped to inspire this project.

Thanks, Jill.
